Get Stymied at the Hickory Heritage MEDIA Golf Classic

A stymie refers to an archaic rule in the game of golf.

In singles match play when one player's ball blocked the path of another player's ball on the green, but were not within six inches of each other, the obstructing player's ball was not lifted.

Instead the player who was furthest away from the hole had to attempt to slice or draw their putt around the obstacle ball. Sometimes a player would even attempt to chip their ball over the opponent's ball into the cup.

If the player failed, even hitting their opponent's ball, their next shot would have to be played from where their ball now lay. If contact happened, the player's opponent, when it was their turn to play, had the choice to take their putt from their ball's original position or its new lie.

Likewise if the player's ball knocked the obstructing ball into the cup, their opponent was considered to have holed out.

The stymie was removed from the rule book in 1952, but in the Hickory Heritage Media Golf Classic it has been revived.
